Possible B2 answers: Notice how each response gives a clear idea and support.

1. What is it like being you?

Example: Being me means balancing responsibilities with the things that make life enjoyable. Like everyone, I am still learning how to make better decisions.

2. What is it like getting older? When does old age begin?

Example: Getting older can bring more confidence and perspective, although it may also bring health concerns. Old age is difficult to define because people age differently.

3. What is it like being able to speak a foreign language?

Example: Speaking a foreign language is both challenging and rewarding. It allows people to connect across cultures and see familiar ideas from a different point of view.

4. What is being sick like?

Example: Being sick can make ordinary tasks feel difficult and remind us how valuable normal health is. It can also be lonely when someone has to stay away from others.

5. What does being in love feel like?

Example: Being in love often involves excitement, trust and a strong desire to share life with another person. Healthy love also requires respect and honest communication.

6. What might having a baby be like?

Example: Having a baby may be joyful and meaningful, but it also involves major responsibility, disrupted sleep and financial planning. Support from family or community can be important.

7. What are your friends like?

Example: My friends are varied, but the people I value most are honest, kind and able to laugh at themselves. We do not need to agree about everything.

8. What is the best feeling in the world?

Example: For me, one of the best feelings is relief after completing something difficult with people I care about. It combines achievement, gratitude and connection.
