Possible B2 answers: Notice how each response gives a clear idea and support.

1. How would you describe your fashion sense?

Example: A developed answer about personal identity could explain a personal view, give a clear reason and include a relevant example.

2. Who has influenced your life most?

Example: In my view, personal identity is important because it affects everyday decisions and relationships. Context often matters more than one simple rule.

3. What is your most valued possession?

Example: I would consider both the advantages and possible difficulties before reaching a conclusion. Listening to other perspectives can improve the discussion.

4. What would you like to improve about yourself?

Example: This can vary greatly between individuals and cultures. A thoughtful answer should avoid assumptions and explain its reasoning.

5. Tell me about your family background.

Example: I think practical support and honest communication are usually more useful than quick judgement. Small actions can make a meaningful difference.

6. What skill do you wish you had?

Example: Experience has taught me that long-term habits matter more than a single moment. It helps to set realistic goals and review progress.

7. How would you like to be remembered?

Example: A good example would show how values and circumstances can shape a person's choices. There is rarely only one acceptable answer.

8. What do you like most about yourself?

Example: Overall, I would try to respond with empathy and evidence. That approach leads to a more balanced and useful conclusion.
